

Telephone numbers are no longer fixed to physical lines and the dynamics of VoIP allows users to instantly appoint unlimited number types to suit their needs.

Netcomm can offer you a wide range of telephone numbers to give you the flexibility and presence that a fixed line service simply cannot do.

Converting numbers to VoIP is easy and Netcomm is able to port existing telephone numbers from most networks into the cloud.

Netcomm offers UK wide geographic (01, 02) and non-geographic (03, 08) telephone numbers, virtual mobile (07) along with phone numbers from over 70 countries and thousands of cities internationally.

Presenting the best possible image includes getting the right phone number and is pivotal to any brand.

You can create quality opportunities, generate new business or tactically target the customers you want. You'll find certain phone numbers will suit your business better than others.

Netcomm has its own pool of telephone number allocations which means that you can choose from a large pool of numbers from around Britain including London to Glasgow and Belfast and can supply most international city numbers.

Netcomm can provide these along with other specialist service numbering such as premium rate and revenue sharing.

An 0300 number is a special type of landline-rate phone number used by government bodies, the public sector, charities and not-for-profit organisations.

Unlike traditional landline phone numbers, 0300 numbers are not linked with specific geographic locations. However, the cost to call an 0300 number within the UK is always the same as calling a normal home or business landline.
